A poem by Gideon Heugh

We are where the divine dwells - not in stone or marble, but in our soft and playful bodies.

We are God's temple - not the lavish of gilded but the lowly and unexpected.

We are the church -
not an institution or an idea but a rabble of flawed, belly-laughing, mess-making, tear-shedding, culture-shaking, head-scratching dreamers.
